gently along the road of evening.
In a twilight dim with rose,
Wrinkled with age and drenched with dew,
Old Ned the shepherd goes.

His drowsy flock streams on before him.

Their fleeces charged with gold,
To where the sun's last beam leans
low,
On Ned the shepherd's fold.

The hedge is quick and green with briar,

From their side the conies creep;
And all the birds that fly in heaven
Flock singing home to sleep.

His lambs outnumber a moon's rays,
Yet, when night's shadows fall,
His blind old sheep-dog, slumber-sown,
Misses not one of all.

His are the quiet sleeps of dreamland,
The waters of no-morereign,

His name's bell rings north an arch
of stars,

"Rest, rest, and rest again."

King Neptune Awaits Cruise Passengers

King Neptune and his jolly crew of buccaners will have their first opportunity of subjecting West Indies Cruise passengers to the traditional rites of the "Fishy Court" when the Empress of Australia, in the course of one of the Canadian Pacific's eight West Indies cruises this winter, crosses the equator on her way to Rio de Janeiro.

For the first time in West Indies, cruising the glamorous Brazilian city, with the "most beautiful harbor in the world" and unspoiled mountain scenery along within its city limits, has included in a Caribbean itinerary and the Empress will cross the equator and be boarded by King Neptune on route there. St. George's, Grenada, one of the lovely Windward Islands, and also a new port of call, will be another attraction of the 32 day cruise starting from New York on January 15. Five days will be spent at Rio, time enough for a thorough exploration of the glamorous Latin city and its surrounding beauties and one evening will be devoted to a special round of the exotic night-life of the metropolis. At Grenada lovely St. George's, guarded by ancient Fort St. George, has peculiar charm among Caribbean towns. During the day spend there a special excursion will go to Grand Etang, a volcanic lake set high in the mountains overlooking the town.

The Empress of Britain, world cruise flagship of the Canadian Pacific, will lead off the West Indies season with a 12 day Christmas and New Year trip to Jamaica, the Panama Canal Zone and Cuba. The Empress of Australia follows with seven voyages, leaving New York: January 4, March 11 and March 22, for six days each voyage, to the Bahamas, Cuba and Bermuda; January 15, for 32 days, to Barbados, Rio de Janeiro, Grenada, Venezuela and Jamaica; February 15, for 19 days, to Martinique, Barbados, Trinidad, Curacao, the Panama Canal Zone, Jamaica and Cuba; April 12, for 12 days, to Jamaica, Cuba and the Bahamas; and finally, April 14, an Easter Holiday Cruise, for ten days, to Jamaica and Cuba.

Picture layout shows a glimpse of beautiful Grenada, the Empress of Australia and happy scenes from the colorful ceremonies which highlight King Neptune's visit.

LIVING

The millionaires think they are living when they are hoarding up the gold, the soldiers call it living when he's doing something bold.

Oh the thing that we call living isn't gold or fame at all! It's fellowship and sunshine and it's roses by the wall.

It's evenings glad with music and a hearth fire that's ablaze, and the joy which come to mortals in a thousand different ways.

It is laughter and contentment and the struggle for a goal; it is everything that's needful in the shaping of a soul.

CHRISTMAS ESSAY CONTEST

With wheat still standing in the stocks in many fields in the surrounding country, talking of Christmas may seem a bit unreasonable, and an explanation will be in order.

The Standard is deeply appreciative of the co-operation given in the interesting articles which have been contributed at our request by the official men and women in our town and district and which have helped greatly to make an interesting, varied and unique Christmas number for the past several years. Variety is said to be the spice of life however, hence this year the Standard is arranging an Essay Contest, the details of which are published on front page. We hope this contest will create much interest and we look forward to publishing some very worthy essays.

We have received the consent of three very competent judges, and we hope for a large number of creditable compositions.

ROBBERY

Local and nearby districts have been experiencing a large number of robberies recently. This involves exposure to those robbed and to the general public who have to foot the bill for police protection.

We do not jump to the conclusion that there is more robbery as a whole now than before. It may be that it has been brought to our notice more because of its nearness.

From what we have read and heard, we in Canada and especially in Alberta have been extremely fortunate in regard to our crime situation. In all other countries crime has grown into an immense racket and the cost to the public is immense. We suppose that there is an inherent tendency in humans to steal, to get something for nothing or without the usual process of business dealing or labor. This tendency leads some to attempt robbery, when for some reason they feel that it will profit themselves.

Lack of careful moral training in childhood is probably a great cause of crime because there is no doubt that there are a great many people who never steal and would not do so under any circumstances.

It is no doubt true too, that some find it so hard to make an honest living that they are gradually shunted into crime as a means of livelihood. Our business world is a world of every man for himself and many the best man win. Not all the stealing that is done is of the break-in variety, because there are plenty of permitted methods of extortion which steal as much as the more apparent methods.

It may be concluded then, that effort spent in preventing crime, in moral education by parents and others, in attempts to ease the burden of unfortunate individuals, and in organization of society along more equitable lines, would be well spent. It might be cheaper to spend in these ways than to be lax in these and spend much in apprehending criminals providing jails, repairing damaged life and property, and in general cleaning up after the mess has been made.

Society had better be on the watch

The Facts About Banking in Canada

Reproduced from the Sixth Broadcast in a Series by Vernon Knowles for the Chartered Banks of Canada and Delivered Over a Province-Wide Network of Alberta Stations on Tuesday Evening, October 12th, from 8:30 to 8:45, and Wednesday, October 13th, from 12:00 noon to 12:15.

Outlines Loan Process by Which Banks Convert Credit of Borrower into Spendable Money . . . Shows Position of Bank Shareholders . . . Deals Further with Limited Power of Banks To Issue Own Notes . . . Cites from Letters Received Actual Cases Where Bank Loans Enabled Borrowers To Turn Substantial Profit.

IN this broadcast on behalf of Canada's Chartered Banks I want to get back to that utterly mistaken idea that banks make money out of nothing. Critics of the banks will tell you that banks lend by creating credit and that they create the means of payment out of nothing, that when they build a building it costs them nothing and that when they pay taxes it costs them nothing. These statements are absolutely untrue.

When a bank makes a loan just exactly what is it that the bank does?

Here is the answer — It takes the note of the farmer or manufacturer or the bond of the Government, and places an equivalent amount to the credit of the said farmer, manufacturer or Government, allowing of course for a rental on the money.

In other words the bank assumes an obligation to pay that amount to the farmer, the manufacturer or the Government.

Since that obligation is one that must be met — and in actual practice it is — it is a very real thing.

The transaction creates a credit on the books of the bank but the means of payment which the banks are charged with creating out of nothing consists of resources of the bank — in the last analysis, cash.

Moreover, it should be borne in mind that in all lending transactions by a bank it is the borrower who starts the process — he goes to the bank and asks for a loan, generally for a specific purpose, out of which he expects and intends to make a profit for himself over and above the bank charges. The bank does not go to him — he goes to the bank.

What the bank really does, in effect, is to convert the credit of the borrower himself into spendable money, which he can use for the purposes of his business, paying wages, paying his debts at the country store and meeting other obligations. If a man owns cattle he cannot spend cattle. He cannot pay his debts at the country store with cattle. His ownership of the cattle and his expectation of selling them at a profit to himself are the basis of his credit. When he borrows from a bank on the security of cattle what happens is that the bank converts a form of wealth, which he cannot spend, into something which he can spend and which anybody else will accept.

There is no magic about it and those who contend that a bank can create money or the means of payment out of nothing — are entirely wrong. The function that the bank performs, as we have stated, is to convert the credit of the borrower into a form in which he can spend it.

Without a bank the farmer possibly could buy seed in the spring, hire help through the growing season and harvesting, and purchase supplies for his family in the meantime on credit — paying these debts from the sale of his crop in the fall. However, common sense tells us that the seed merchant, the farm labourer or the country store keeper could not get very far on this basis, for they could not pass on to the people from whom they in turn buy goods or services, the obligations which they have received from the farmer.

Why is this so?

For the reason that, be the farmer's credit ever so good, how could scores of people look into his integrity and his financial worth, as they would require to do before taking his promise-to-pay. Instead, the bank looks into the farmer's affairs, accepts the risk, lends him the money and enables him to pay cash.

If it were otherwise and if banks created the means of payment out of nothing, why has it been necessary through the centuries to find people, called shareholders, ready to put their money into the banking business in exchange for a fair return? If no basis is required for what the bank does, the business of banking should be an amazingly profitable business — but it is not. The fact that it is not an amazingly profitable business is a simple matter of record, as we have shown in our broadcasts.

Some of our listeners have asked that I say more about note circulation — that is, about the powers of a bank to issue notes. The request has been prompted by the utterly fantastic idea that a bank can, say, erect an expensive branch office building for nothing by issuing its own notes. A bank simply cannot, as has been suggested, issue a bunch of specially numbered bills, pay them out to contractors and others and then cancel them when they come back.

Let me say to you again that no such thing can possibly happen, for the bank must give the holder false value for its notes when he presents them. Moreover, I have shown you that there are very definite legal limits upon the amount of notes that a bank can issue. A bank's notes are debt owed by the bank to the person who holds them — a debt redeemable in cash on demand.

As a matter of fact, a bank's notes are the property that charge upon its assets — that is to say, its base of trouble a bank's notes have to be paid off before a single cent can be paid on any deposits or on any other debts owed by a bank. To make doubly sure of this there is a fund in the hands of the Dominion Minister of Finance, known as "The Bank Circulation Redemption Fund."

This is money paid in by each of the banks to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa, amounting to five per cent on the average amount of Chartered Bank notes outstanding. This money is in the nature of a pool and would all be used, in case of need, towards paying off the notes of any bank. Surely all of this should finally quench the idea that a bank has unlimited power in the matter of issuing its bills.

In any case, as I have told you before, the right of issuing notes is being steadily, year by year, taken away from the Chartered Banks and vested in the Bank of Canada. In order to obtain Bank of Canada notes or bills for use as currency the Chartered Banks have to buy them. Every dollar in notes and every dollar of other bank obligations must always have behind it a dollar of assets. Let me stress, once more, that every obligation of a Chartered Bank is payable in cash.

Some supposedly great authority is quoted as having said that if all bank loans were paid all deposits would disappear and there would be no money in existence. I don't think that many Alberta people are stampeded by such statements.

It is equivalent to saying that if every sea were drained dry there would be no ocean liners. If every bank went out of existence to-morrow there would still be wealth but the job of marketing that wealth would take us back to the dim, distant days of barter. Nothing is gained at any time by such extreme statements.

You have been told that when a bank makes a loan and takes security the bank then uses that security as if it were its own. Such a statement is 100 per cent false. The security lodged with the bank remains the property of the borrower and all the records of the bank prove that fact. He can call for his security to be produced and shown to him at any time. (Such security does not appear in the bank's balance sheet, all and when the loan is repaid the security is handed back to the borrower intact.)

Some of our critics plunge into a very deep water when they draw conclusions from the statement that every dollar that comes into circulation represents a dollar on which somebody must pay interest. That statement is used to convey to you a sinister impression, an entirely false idea of what money really is and does.

To illustrate in the plainest of everyday terms let us start from the beginning:

I go into the bank and I borrow $1,000 on which, naturally, I have to pay rent, or if you prefer, interest.

The bank gives me, in exchange for my note, $1,000 in bills. I have got $1,000 of money, on which interest has to be paid because the bank is giving me a service.

Why do I borrow the money? I was going to use it in a deal, expecting to make a profit for myself; or I wouldn't have borrowed the money at all.

Very well, I carry out the deal successfully. I repay the bank the $1,000 I borrowed, and I have a profit, say, of $100, which I put to my credit in the bank.

You will see by the use of this borrowed money on which I paid rent, I have increased my own resources by $100, the bank has received back its $1,000.

When you multiply that thousand-dollar borrowing of mine, my use of the money and my profit are time after time, you see what is happening continuously throughout the year in the business world and you see that the interest is not any strange charge as has been represented to you. You pay rent, and you make a profit out of it — whatever the nature of your business may be.

It is a continuous, revolving process — in which the dollar you use is not dead-weight debt at all, but productive money. There are times, however, when some of it may become temporarily dead-weight debt. To illustrate such a case, let us say that through drought or misfortune I suffer a loss for a season — say my deal has not been successful — and I lose a part of my borrowed $1,000.

In these cases, what I have lost does for the time being become dead-weight debt. But with a better season and better prices and better business I have a chance to recover my losses and repay. By far the greater part of the dollar that are issued are not dead-weight debt as you have been so often told; there is nothing sink in the manner nor in the purpose of their issue, nor in the work that they do; they are, in fact, productive money, constantly adding to goods and services and increasing the world's store of new wealth.

That is all there is to bank money. Bank loans are really constructive and productive; and the deep, dark hocus pocus with which critics seek to surround it is recognized, by folks of practical experience, as simply transparent nonsense.

Since we started broadcasting on behalf of Canada's Chartered Banks I have received many letters from Alberta people: I have before me one of them, which gives an instance of a large-scale farmer who had occasion to borrow $5,000 to purchase feeder cattle.

This farmer says: "When I borrow money I estimate my prospective profit very carefully and, if I do not see where I am going to make interest charges and a substantially higher profit for myself I do not borrow the money. Without a bank loan I could not possibly have financed the purchase of the cattle and, further, I feel that the bank's profit is small and mine proportionately large. I consider that I should assume most of the risk of the loan for the sake of this higher prospective profit. My borrowing is intelligent borrowing from a purely individual and selfish standpoint. I had a similar loan, on which the interest charges amounted to about $100 some time ago. On this loan I realized a net profit of more than $2,000 because I was able to feed all of my coarse grain and to realize in the neighbourhood of ninety cents a bushel when prices were in the neighbourhood of twenty to thirty cents a bushel."

I have another Alberta letter, in which a farmer tells us that he had twenty hogs and, being short of feed, wanted to sell them. He was offered $200 for the twenty hogs and did not want to let them go at that price, so he went to the bank and borrowed $500 only. This enabled him to hold the hogs and feed them a while longer, with the result that he eventually sold them for $300 instead of the $200 he had been offered. In other words he borrowed $50 from the bank, the bank made a gross revenue of about $1.75 but the farmer made a straight profit of $100.

I have a letter before me also which appeared in the Calgary Herald from a Milk Producers' Association in the vicinity of Calgary. It reads in part: "We are hearing a good deal about banks these days. I do not profess to know just about what the banking business but I do know that, if it had not been for the banks last fall, I, along with many others, would have been forced out of business." These are but a few examples taken at random from a large quantity of our mail.

In earlier broadcasts I have told you that deposits in the banks are the basis upon which banks can make loans. Let us demonstrate its truth.

Suppose a bank started with $50,000 in cash and lent that amount to various borrowers. Then suppose each borrower drew out the amount lent to him, in cash, and each person to whom he paid this money put it in a sock, kept it under his mattress or hid it behind the clock, so that none of it came back to the bank in the form of deposits. As the bank has no cash in its vaults, the bank dare not make another loan because it could give no cash to the new borrower.

We can go on converting borrowers' assets into spendable form, i.e., making loans, only if the depositing public are willing to entrust their funds to us. It is the confidence of the people in banks and their willingness to leave their money on deposit that enables a bank to create money and serve the community.

How, therefore, can it be said that we have usurped the right to monetize credit as we have shown, is the individual who in the first place possesses the credit; he asks the bank to convert that credit into money he can spend. The bank only does it on his request.

Now I have an announcement to make. This is the last of our broadcasts, at least for the time being. In one of our broadcasts we said that some of our Alberta branch Bank Managers might be heard in this series. Instead, I incorporated in my talks with you, much material which came to me direct from them.

We told you starting our talks that we would be non-political and non-controversial and would state to you nothing but the unvarnished facts about Canada's Chartered Banks and the work they do. This is exactly what we have done. There is no mystery about Canadian banking, other than the mystery created by critics who are not well informed.

We are doing an honest business and have nothing whatever to fear from the fullest disclosure. Four million depositors have confidence in Canada's Chartered Banks. Were it not for that confidence in the honour and integrity of Canada's Chartered Banks, no loans could be made at all.

We wish to thank our listening audience for the many encouraging letters and messages they have sent in. Our talk has all been put into pamphlet form, and if you wish to have them, any branch Bank Manager will be glad to give them to you and to talk over with you any of the matters with which we have dealt.

Theorists never run out of theories — but facts are stubborn things. Our story stands on its own merits for consideration. We leave it to you with confidence.

In announcing the purchase of this equipment Mr. Hungerford emphasized that the move was of an experimental nature and was intended to permit of tests being made on various sections of the system as to the adaptability of these cars for use in Canada. It is believed they will cut down operating costs very considerably on light traffic branch lines and at the same time give better service to the public dependent upon such lines.
